

AMCHP Annual Conference - Audience Information

The Association of Maternal & Child Health Programs (AMCHP) represents state maternal and child health organizations that work across the life-span to address a broad range of family health issues covering a wide span of populations. Participants at the conference include researchers, academics, advocacy organizations, federal officials, and families.

The AMCHP Annual Conference will offer an unprecedented gathering of leaders in maternal and child health, public health practitioners, and family advocates. The 100+ sessions are typically led by researchers, federal officials, family and youth leaders, advocates, healthcare providers, and directors of state programs. The conference program covers a range of MCH topics and contributes to building attendee competency in the 12 MCH Leadership Competency domains. The conferences promise to educate, motivate, and promote collaboration among the nearly 1,000 attendees and more than 50 sponsors and exhibitors. In addition to the learning and sharing, time is dedicated to special recognition and celebration of families and MCH colleagues for all they do every day to improve the health of women, children, fathers, and families.
